

Microsoft Certified Architect: Solutions Program

Acronym/Nickname

Certification Body

Microsoft

Description

The Microsoft Certified Architect (MCA) program identifies top industry experts in the fields of IT architecture. Unlike other industry certifications, this credential is designed, built, and granted by industry peers, and candidates are required to present to and be approved through a rigorous review board process overseen by previously certified architects.

Certification Level

Covered competencies

The MCA certification for solutions architects was designed for IT architects whose key areas of focus include integration, workflow, and applications (purchased, developed, and business).

Successful candidates for the solutions architecture certification generally have more than 10 years of experience in IT, and three or more years of specific architectural experience.

Requirements

MCA candidates must:

1. Attend and successfully complete the training.
 2. Successfully weekly written tests.
 3. Successfully complete the lab-based exam.
- Successfully complete the certification Review Board interview.
